Iqbal Khan with wife Sneha on their honeymoon

We make it a point to watch at least one film every day in the theatre. And if not in the theatre then we watch a DVD. Both Sneha and I have become diehard movie buffs. Marriage so far has been an extended honeymoon. There were no adjustments with with each other or our families since we've known each other for years now," Iqbal says affectionately.

Shocking as it may sound, Iqbal Khan chose not to honeymoon at any of those exotic spots that his wife selected on the Internet. Reason? "I wasn't sure I'd get a visa for any of those countries. After the experience I went through some months ago who knows how the immigration authorities would've reacted to my name," he laughs, referring to his humiliating experience with the American consulate which rejected his visa plea some months ago arguing that his name suggested terrorist links.

Iqbal adds, "I'd rather not think about these things. There are enough holiday spots in our own country for my wife and me. We spent a blissful week in the Maldives. And our honeymoon is still on since I'm not working currently. But I'm working out rigorously as I had lately had put on a lot of weight. Now when I return viewers will see the taut character Angad that they saw in Kyun Hota Hai Pyarr when I first appeared on television."
