

"With Neha (Bamb), I share a very professional relationship. Initially, we did have some problems. But it never affected our work. It's not possible to be best friends with everyone you work with"

Ok, so he's on decent terms with Neha now. But what is this we've heard about something brewing between him and co-star Manasi Verma? Iqbal looks at me with an incredulous expression. "Me and Manasi? You must be joking! She's like my brother. She's one rough and tough gal."

So he doesn't like rough and tough girls then? "I didn't say that," he shoots back. "Manasi is a very sweet girl. But there's nothing like that between us. We're just buddies. This is the first time we've met anyways."

So hasn't he heard, that sometimes once is just enough? "Yeah, that's true. But trust me, in the case of Manasi and me, we're just friends," he laughs.

We actually do believe him about that one. But here's another mind-boggling thing that we've heard. Apparently, after mending fences with Neha, he's actually developed quite a soft corner for her and rumour has it that they're actually thinking of getting together. "Mad or what?" he questions again. "Now you're just making up things man. This is utter nonsense. Neha and me, God no! I'm an absolute one-woman man and I already have a woman in my life."

NO LOVE LOST BETWEEN IQBAL AND NEHA BAMB?

When these two first started shooting, they couldn't stand the sight of each other. Iqbal supposedly thought she had a major attitude problem. In fact it's not just Iqbal, other cast members including Amit Tandon and Suvarna Jha just couldn't get along with Neha. What a wonderful working environment it must be where everyone seems to hate the leading lady?
